What kind of tree is this?

Todo-matsu(Abies sachalinensis), Ezo-matsu (Hokkaido spruce), and Akaezo-matsu(Picea glehnii) are common needleleaf trees in the Asahidake hotspring area. I've heard that the branches of Todo-matsu are upward branches. But in the winter, snow makes all the branches of trees go downward... So, I don't know the difference (ToT). This time, I'll let you know how to easily identify a tree even winter.

【Leaf characteristics】

Todo-matsu
(Abies sachalinensis)

Ezo-matsu
(Hokkaido spruce)

Akaezo- matsu
(Picea glehnii)

look closely, the apex of leaf is rounded and split like "M"

At a glance, it resemble Todo-matsu, but the apex of leaf is sharp like sword.

Compared to Todo-matsu and Ezo-matsu, The size of leaf is about 0.5 to 1cm short.

【Bark characteristics】

Grayish-white and flat and smooth texture.

Black-brown and peels off like shape of a scale.

Reddish brown as its name "Akaezo- matsu" and irregularly scaly
